20-year Tech Industry Vet Bobby Christian Joins Board of Three Pillar Software

August 12, Fairfax, Virginia – Three Pillar Software, Inc. (TPS), a leading software development and systems integration provider headquartered in Northern Virginia, recently announced the appointment of Bobby Christian to the company’s Board of Directors. Christian brings more than two decades of technology industry experience to TPS, which is looking to Christian to provide operational guidance and managerial support as it builds services and adds staff. In less than two years, Three Pillar Software has enjoyed strong growth, beginning with a single founding programmer and expanding to include a stable of highly experienced technologists who now serve myriad clients in both the federal and commercial markets.

"We are pleased to welcome Bobby to our board," noted David DeWolf, president and chief executive officer of TPS. "He has been an unofficial advisor of ours for some time. His extensive background in business leadership for emerging companies will be a tremendous asset."

The former executive vice president and general manager of the Enterprise Consulting Group at American Systems, Christian launched American System's commercial division, growing revenues to a run rate of $12M within the first 11 months of operations. He led the creation of three core service offerings: Identity & Access Management, Process Improvement, and Information Assurance.

"I'm delighted to be a member of the TPS board," explained Christian. "I've been impressed with their skill and strategy since first interacting with the company founders a little more than two years ago. It's clear to me that TPS is poised to become a standout software development company, and I'm looking forward to helping cultivate that success."

Prior to his role at American Systems, Christian was the founder and CEO of True North Solutions. There, he grew revenue to a run rate of more than $90M before the company was acquired by American Systems in July 2004. Christian has served in a variety of executive roles in privately held organizations and has also held board positions for a number of companies. He is a member of the Potomac Officer's Club and is a graduate of MindShare. Additionally, Christian is Chairman of the Board of Unsung Heroes USA (www.unsung-heroes.org), a non-profit organization dedicated to strengthening unrecognized leaders within the marginalized communities of southern African countries. He also sits on the advisory boards of several local technology companies. Christian earned his B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering from Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, VA.

Founded in April, 2006, Three Pillar Software specializes in application development and systems integration, differentiating itself based on expertise in open source technologies and Agile development methods. TPS also offers coaching and consulting in Agile methodologies, and can deliver a complete range of technical outsourcing, management, and strategic consulting services.
